...Shale Rules

Among other things, H.R. 2392 would prohibit the issuance of a full patent to oil shale claims for which a patent application had not been filed, and all requirements to obtain a patent had not been fully complied with, by January 24, 1989. That's the date of introduction for H.R. 643.

For any patent application filed before that date, on which a patent had not been granted, a patent could be issued for the oil shale and associated minerals. That limited patent would leave all surface rights in the hands of the U.S. government though, and...

...by the claimant of $2,000/acre, a big increase from the $2.50/acre patent fee included in the 1920 law covering oil shale, which was a spin-off of provisions in the Mining Law of 1872.

If a limited patent is not granted, then any claimants would, according to a committee summary of the bill, "have the option of converting the claim to an oil shale lease or maintaining the unpatented claim under a new diligent development requirement."

The lease option provides for a lease term of...

...long as oil shale is being produced in commercial quantities.

When it comes to unpatented claim retention, the Interior committee summary explains that "the claimant must make a diligent development expenditure of at least $5,000 per claim per year." Under current law, that figure is $100.

Claimholders Get a Century To Develop...

New Patent Drafting Software Saves Inventors Time and Money; Innovative PatentWizard to Aid Businesses and Individual Inventors Alike.

... to patent the new product at all. But now, a new software program called the PatentWizard 2.0 allows the inventor to draft their own patent applications and take advantage of...

...of strategy known as the "Provisional" Patent Application or PPA.

"The main goal of the PatentWizard is to provide inventors with a useful tool during the early stages of the invention process," says PatentWizard inventor and Registered Patent Attorney Michael S. Neustel.

"It gives inventors 'patent pending' while they...

...of their inventions at the same time avoiding the high costs of a Patent Attorney." PatentWizard guides the inventor through a series of steps and produces a printed PPA suitable for...

...typical PPA can cost an inventor $2,000 or more with many patent attorneys. The PatentWizard sells for just $199. The U.S. filing fee for a PPA is currently $75...

...is worth pursuing and file for a formal patent application. Inventors can also use the PatentWizard to present their inventions to a patent attorney thereby reducing the overall legal fees associated with drafting a formal patent application.

The PatentWizard is available exclusively through two inventor resource websites: www.PatentWizard.com & www.PatentCafe.com

Media outlets can download a FREE review copy of PatentWizard. For the "Media Pass Code" contact: Spread The News PR, Inc. - 785/842-8909 or Todd@SpreadTheNewsPR.com
